

Fashion

Fanatic

TIPS FOR CHICKS

EYES ON THE GUYS

Nicole Walker

Sports Editor

Clothes don't wear the person, the person wears the clothes. There's nothing better than a super outfit, but it's all about the ability to spice it up with accessories of the millennium.

Jewelry has always been a favorite for the ladies. Adding a little sparkle above the shoulders is attracting to the eye.

Scoop up the hoops ladies. The wonderful shimmering rings dangling from the ears are back in style. The bigger the better, just make sure the ears don't hang low. Remember...you can never go wrong with multi-colored studs.

Now, earrings usually have a matching set of necklaces and bracelets...coordination will always be in style.

The royalty look is in. Necklaces with dangling chains or beads stringing in a v-shape around the neck will add a little zest.

Not only does body glitter spunk up the skin, so does any nude-shade of glimmer-dusted make-up. Also, plot out intricate designs around the eyes with little body-jewels.

Don't throw away a pair of knickers because they're boring, knock them up a notch with a corky belt that has words that describe your personality on it, for example, "Hottie", "Sexy", "Rock Star", or "Princess." Jeweled belts that dangle down the front can say all those words for you.

It's possible to turn any hopeless pair of threads into a favorite outfit if the perfect help-outs are added.

“Clothes don't wear the person, the person wears the clothes.”

Brandon Powell

Staff Reporter

For the Cabrillo male, four predominate styles of dress stand out: the preppy look, the urban look, the skater/surfer look, and the punk look.

Often, there is a visual separation between people wearing various styles of dress. It is very likely to see people decked out in their Abercrombie and Fitch hanging out together, but not as often would you see someone wearing Fubu or Johnny Blaze hanging out with someone wearing Abercrombie.

However, more and more, clothing designers are becoming multi-lingual in their male designs. Mark Ecko's company, Ecko Unlimited, started out as a corporation whose clothes appealed to the skater/surfer market, but now, Ecko's designs can be purchased everywhere from surf shops to stores appealing to the rap-inspired market.

"Ecko Unlimited has been trying to make clothes for both the skater and the urban market," said Cabrillo sophomore, Andrew Lee.

Modernly, you start to see different markets beginning to incorporate the designs from others. The once totally preppy, plaid tartan shirt is now something conceivable to see in any closet.

Hooded skater sweatshirts are now also an item that can appeal, in their

“...Hoodies are in style for the guys”

Adam Drake, grade 10

own forms, to all markets.

"...Hoodies are in style for the guys," said Cabrillo sophomore, Adam Drake.

Overall, diversity is becoming a common trend in the clothing market

WHOSE 'DO?

Guess who? Name each of the mop-tops above and bring answers to P-4. Winners will receive $5 to Mr. Taco.